Solid footing. Solid foundation. Amazing results.

The formidable RSA Tower soars 745 feet into Mobile's skyline and is recognized as the tallest building in Alabama. It takes a solid foundation to support such a grand structure and reliable technical expertise to ensure long-term success. That's why you need the right mix and the right partner.

GranCem® Slag Cement, part of the Envirocore™ family of eco-efficient products, was a main component in two critical concrete classes for the project – mass concrete in the mat foundation, high-strength columns and shear walls in the lower building floors. GranCem was also proportioned to be used in numerous other applications throughout the RSA Tower.

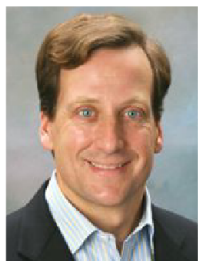

Minimum strength requirements in both mixture classes were exceeded throughout the project. The mass foundation placement was smooth and completed in less than 23 hours, the internal temperatures in the 7'6" thick mat were within the specified limits, strength and performance criteria were accomplished.

Suppliers Keep Innovating, So Should We All

There's no substitute for relentless innovation when it comes to busting out of a slump.

Earlier this summer, at PCBC, I listened as some very experienced industry professionals looked back across the decades at earlier housing downturns. The tenor of the conversation was not gloom and doom. Rather, I was struck by their optimism. They were smiling and nodding as if to say, "This soon shall pass." The group seemed particularly animated on the topic of house design and the potential that it has always held as a way to create opportunities, even today.

Among the group was consultant John Martin of Martin & Associates, Newport Beach, Calif. One by one, he traced every builder-market recovery to the introduction of a specific new house-plan or design feature that seemed to capture the moment. When a plan begins selling well in one market, other builders take notice and adjust their offerings to follow suit. "I'd be willing to bet that is how it is going to happen this time," said Martin.

As you peruse this issue of Professional Builder magazine, I invite you to pay special attention to our list of the "101 Best New Products" of 2011. Hand-picked by our editors, many of these new products support Martin's point — new solutions have the power of driving new sales. Case in point is the first new dishwasher I know of that is designed specifically for an outdoor kitchen, from Kalamazoo Outdoor Gourmet (page 23). Over the years, many types of kitchen appliances have migrated outdoors. Cooktops, refrigerators, ovens, and wine vaults are all among the appliances that are now designed to perform well when exposed to the elements. And with all that gear outside, it makes perfect sense that a dishwasher is also needed. No surprise then to hear that the product is selling incredibly well.

The message for all of us is to keep innovating and pursuing new solutions for today's home buyers. Experience tells us that there is no substitute for relentless innovation when it comes to busting out of a slump.

Breathing Life into Trade Partnerships

I just finished Scott Sedam's article on "The Death of Commodity" (Professional Builder, May 2011, page 46). It's well written and spot on.

The point Scott made about "Ryan" shows how critical it is for leadership to understand that coaching operational excellence means so much more than brow beatings and the "What have you done for me lately?" attitude. It also drives home the point that you get what you measure.

From my experience, to operate in a world (our company) where the executive team is not only on board, but leads the charge is both rewarding and stretching at the same time.

Also, speaking from our experiences here, when we began measuring and then making decisions for trades based on the key elements in a total-cost evaluation model (our "value score card," or VSC), we saw — and continue to see — our costs and quality improve. Trades know that we hang every decision on the VSC and focus on their specific weaknesses in an effort to improve their score. This has caused our entire trade base to improve in all areas of business.

Thanks for the article.

CORRECTION

In our 2011 Housing Giants rankings (Professional Builder, May 2011, page 34), the housing revenue for Simmons Homes should have been $40.5 million, not $400.5 million. The company should have ranked No. 147 on our list, not No. 26. The editors apologize for the error.

4 ALARMED LOCK SYSTEM

Schlage's latest product introduction, the alarmed lock, can detect a range of actions and alert homeowners of activity with their entry doors. Unlike traditional alarms that trigger only when the door is opened, Schlage's alarmed lock activates on first impact. For example, the lock will sound an alert if someone is kicking the door or tampering with the lock.

Editors' Comments: This is one of several novel intruder deterrents to debut during the past year. It also can help homeowners monitor their children by alerting them when the door is opened.

44 STEALTH

Niagara Conservation has developed a remarkably quiet yet powerful high-efficiency toilet that uses just 0.8 gpf to clear contents on a single flush. The Stealth features a patented hydraulic system that uses a combination of air and water to provide a powerful flushing action. At the conclusion of each flush, as water fills the tank and inner chamber, air is forced down through a transfer tube and into the trapway. As a result, this pressurizes the trapway and creates a larger water surface in the bowl, helping to deliver a cleaner, more reliable, and quieter flush.

Editors' Comments: The number-one complaint with high-efficiency toilets is flushing power. Niagara addresses this concern with the Stealth hydraulic system.

53 SMOG-EATING TILE

MonierLifetile's latest concrete roof tile product, Smog-Eating Tile, incorporates a photocatalytic agent (titanium dioxide) that helps break down nitrogen oxide molecules, reducing their impact on the environment. 71 RHEEM GAS-FIRED WATER HEATERS

Rheem has developed a damper design on select residential gas-fired models that enables the units to achieve an energy factor (EF) from 0.67 to 0.69 to meet Energy Star's Phase II requirements. & ELECTRICAL77 LINTALERT

Clothes dryers account for thousands of fires each year in the U.S., and many of those are caused by lint build-up. In-O-Vate Technologies has developed a solution that monitors and displays the back pressure levels found in the exhaust conduit of dryers. LintAlert uses pressure differential technology to measure back flow pressure caused by blockage or restriction in the vent system. As lint builds up over time and restricts airflow, the device's light indicator will progressively illuminate from green to yellow then to red, and an alarm will sound.

Editors' Comments: At about $45, all homeowners should have this safety device installed in their home.

78 NEXT HYBRID

A. O. Smith's NEXT Hybrid water heater performs like a tankless model and can also handle high hot water demand periods. The system features a patented heat transfer process that utilizes a secondary heat exchanger to capture the heated flue gas from the tankless unit and route it back through a buffer tank to extract additional heat. The combined effort of the two technologies creates a highly energy-efficient system, with 90 percent thermal efficiency.

Editors' Comments: With this hybrid system, A.O. Smith addresses a common complaint with tankless technology: interruptions in hot water during periods of high demand.

84 PIN138

Porter-Cable introduces the first ever maintenance-free pin nailer with its new 23GA, 1-3/8" Pin Nailer Kit. The PIN138 fastens materials that would normally split using larger tools, providing greater flexibility and time savings on projects. The consistent power and penetration of the PIN138 is delivered through an internal piston catch that holds the piston-driver assembly at the highest position in the cylinder, resulting in maximum power on each shot and ensuring accurate nail setting.

Editors' Comments: Great for interior finish work, this pin nailer is tiny (just 2.2 pounds), but packs a punch.

87 50TH ANNIVERSARY BRAKE

To mark the anniversary of the first-ever portable brake for the aluminum siding market, Tapco Integrated Tool Systems released its 50th Anniversary Brake, which includes several improvements to the original design. A moving-hinge system eliminates hinge wear and material scraping and allows the hinge to be easily removed for cleaning and lubricating. Improved hinge geometry allows for easier bending while a dual-durometer urethane strip grips work pieces but is rigid where metal is pressed against the brake's anvil.

Editors' Comments: Tapco made a great, timeless tool even better.

90 STYROFOAM SIS

The Styrofoam SIS structural insulated sheathing from Dow combines three functions in one product: structural lateral bracing and transverse loads, good insulation performance, and a water-resistive barrier. It offers a high R-value (R-3 at 0.5 inch; R-5.5 at 1 inch), which in turn reduces energy consumption and greenhouse gas emissions. The system also resists moisture intrusion and air infiltration; reduces installation time, labor, and material; and eliminates the need for wood structural panels and housewrap.

Editors' Comments: We continue to see innovation in the area of the building envelope. By combining multiple functions, builders and remodelers can save on labor and material and minimize waste, while offering enhanced weathertightness and energy efficiency.

91 TETRAGRIP FASTENING SYSTEM

Designed to eliminate subfloor nail squeaks while providing more holding power, the TetraGrip Subfloor Fastening System from Paslode features a barb-threaded design that allows the fastener to drive like a nail and hold like a screw. The proprietary nail shank design drives as fast as a nail, but rotates as it drives to bond with the wood fibers, minimizing wood destruction when driven, thereby greatly reducing the chance of squeaks and loose subfloors down the road.

Editors' Comments: Knowing that subfloor nails are the primary culprit of floor squeaks, Paslode's engineering team set out to eliminate them with this novel fastener.

92 NAPAWRAP COASTAL HOUSE WRAP

Designed specifically for coastal and severe weather regions, NapaWrap Coastal house wrap from Propex offers a "tear free" guarantee: If it tears under normal use according to manufacturer's guidelines, the company will replace it for free. The wrap also has more than twice the UV protection of leading brands and can go uncovered for up to one year, according to the maker. The vapor and moisture barrier keeps water out, but allows moisture vapor to escape from the inside of the wall exterior.

Editors' Comments: Propex is backing up its claims about its new coastal-wrap product with an industry-first guarantee against tearing.

93 ECOSEAL

The latest addition to Knauf Insulation's product line, EcoSeal is a fast-drying, water-based elastomeric spray that seals penetrations and joints in the building envelope, including exterior walls, attics, and floors. The low-odor, low-VOC sealant dries to a flexible tough film and has good bond strength, sealing penetrations and joints to help increase energy efficiency.

Editors' Comments: Seal your homes without the need for full body protection, an external air supply, or hazardous chemicals mixed on site.

94 INSULATED PRECAST CONCRETE WALL SYSTEMS

The industry's first NAHB Green Approved foundation systems, Superior Walls' Xi and R-5 insulated precast concrete wall systems use up to 70 percent less concrete in a new home than conventional foundations. The custom wall assemblies contribute to the overall home insulation value and help reduce air infiltration into the home, potentially lowering energy costs. The foundation systems come complete with built-in accesses for wiring and plumbing, stud facing for easy drywall installation, and custom openings for windows and doors.

Editors' Comments: Higher R-value, reduced air infiltration, less concrete. What's not to love.

96 ECOTOUCH WITH PUREFIBER

Owens Corning is taking its tried-and-true EcoTouch PINK fiberglass insulation line to a new level of green with the introduction of PureFiber binder technology. Unlike traditional binders, which utilize a formaldehyde-based formulation, PureFiber is made with natural materials, offering a formaldehyde-free product — and at no additional cost. The product uses a minimum of 50 percent recycled content (30 percent post-consumer) — the highest certified percentage in the fiberglass insulation industry — and features good product recovery, stiffness, strength, and softness.

Editors' Comments: Owen Corning is sinking millions into retrofitting its plants to produce EcoTouch in an effort to reduce the environmental impact of its insulation, and it's not charging customers a penny more for the new product. Hats off to OC!

97 ECOSTUD

Made from 100-percent recycled resin, the EcoStud Track and Stud System from Superior Polymer is designed specifically for framing interior, non-load-bearing walls or partitions that support gypsum wallboard construction. The durable, lightweight members minimize thermal bridging, helping to prevent rapid heat loss. EcoStuds are impervious to water and are designed for fast installation using common tools — the studs can be cut and trimmed with a chop saw.

Editors' Comments: For extreme-green builders and remodelers, EcoStud is worth a look as an alternative to wood and metal framing.

98 INSULATED SERIES STRUCTURAL FRAMING MEMBERS

iLevel by Weyerhaeuser has introduced its Insulated Series of structural framing members designed to help builders meet the latest energy-efficiency standards. The series includes headers, rim board, and corners that incorporate a layer of foam insulation to provide higher R-values and reduced thermal bridging than traditional framing methods. iLevel Insulated Series products are pre-assembled to optimize materials and are available in standard sizes to fit 2x6 conventional framing dimensions.

Editors' Comments: As energy codes become more stringent across the nation, products like the Insulated Series will help builders and remodelers meet code.

99 AIR RENEW

CertainTeed's AirRenew significantly reduces, for up to 75 years, harmful volatile organic compounds (VOCs) that circulate indoors. AirRenew uses two technologies to actively improve indoor air quality. First, AirRenew helps clean the air by capturing VOCs, specifically formaldehyde and other aldehydes, and converting them into inert compounds that safely remain within the board. Additionally, AirRenew features M2Tech technology, which is specially engineered to provide enhanced protection against moisture and mold.

Editors' Comments: Increased awareness of indoor air quality is driving demand products like AirRenew.

100 SHEETROCK ULTRALIGHT PANELS

The lightest ½-inch gypsum wallboard panel available (1.2 to 1.4 lbs./sf), Sheetrock UltraLight Panels from USG are up to 30 percent lighter than traditional gypsum panels. The panels are for use in non-fire rated applications such as new residential and repair and remodel construction and can be used on ceilings with 24-inch-on-center frame spacing when water-based texture is applied.

Editors' Comments: Lighter drywall means less fatigue for installation crews, which can result in improved productivity.

101 XP READY MIX JOINT COMPOUND WITH DUST-TECH

National Gypsum's ProForm brand XP Ready Mix Joint Compound with Dust-Tech is an all-purpose, low-dust joint treatment with enhanced mold resistance. The compound's dust-control formulation causes dust to fall straight to the floor, reducing airborne dust by more than 60 percent. In addition, the product achieved the highest possible score for mold resistance on both the ASTM G 21 and ASTM D 3273 tests and achieved Greenguard Children & Schools certification.

Editors' Comments: We like how this product provides both dust and mold control in one. It's a great solution for those concerned about both worker and homeowner health and safety.

invest in stainless steel – it's worth it

When evaluating the cost of upgrading to stainless-steel fasteners, “economical” is probably not the first word that comes to mind. However when compared to the overall job, the small additional cost of stainless steel is inexpensive insurance against corrosion and unattractive staining that can occur with other fasteners. Stainless-steel fasteners are reliable and long lasting, and reduce costly callbacks, which means happier customers and repeat business. And by choosing Simpson Strong-Tie® fasteners you receive our commitment to quality, performance and service.

For outdoor construction, make sure your fastener is stainless steel. It's worth it. Learn more by visiting www.strongtie.com/fasten or by calling (800) 999-5099.
